Lightweight construction as a design solution.

Numerous international markets are served by the Austrian Group location, and Porsche Salzburg is the largest vehicle dealer in Europe. During the expansion of a new staff restaurant, an interim solution was needed for 4 months.

Highlights:

- » Effective with complete equipment
- » Economical: Use of customer's own equipment
- » Cooperation with partners on site
- » Delicate structural design

» Complete equipment guarantees effectiveness

In a time window of 2 hours, 500 employees eat their lunch here, 4 menus are available daily. The Telia interim restaurant was designed with 250 seats, furthermore included in the technical equipment were a kitchen, a buffet line for the food distribution, an extractor fan with exhaust air purification and cooling as well as a flushing system. This complete outsourcing of the restaurant enabled parallel expansion in an optimal schedule.

» Economical: Use of customer's own equipment

When planning the kitchen technology, Telia appliances were combined with elements from the existing kitchen. For the special logistical requirements of an interim kitchen, such efficient processes could be accomplished with the greatest possible budget protection.

» Cooperation with partners on site

Domestic engineering as well as infrastructure and service partners of the customer are well acquainted with the conditions at the construction site. Telia has therefore also integrated it into the project team at Porsche Salzburg. Tailored planning in logistics, electricity / water supply and disposal, efficient construction, perfect operation and thus compliance with the tight schedule could be optimally ensured.

» Delicate structural design

The Porsche Salzburg Headquarters were built in highly sophisticated architecture. Glass pavilions of disintegrated trade and service companies use the good visibility on a busy road crossing. The interim restaurant had to integrate gracefully into this ensemble with high customer numbers. For the structural solution, Telia therefore relied on air-conditioned lightweight construction halls, which can be color-matched to the environment and provide a professional solution on time.
